

The Visitors Help

By Molly Edwards

I was walking to school it was my first day of kindergarten, I was jovial. As I walked I could hear the crunch of the leaves and the chatter of children. My teacher was Ms. Moon she was sweet I loved her colorful dress that she is wearing. We had to take a test to see how much we knew. It was mainly easy except for one problem. My teacher asked Violet "are you okay"? I said yes, before long my visions started my head bobbed up and down and kept yawning then the numbers blended together and I got my total. Later that day my teacher came up to me and said "Violet please give this to your father", I cast my eyes to the floor and said I don't have a father," then give it to your mother" I said yes Mam. The next day my Mom had a meeting with Ms. Moon they talked for an hour though it felt like ten hours I stared at the pictures of presidents that the first graders drew. The door suddenly swung open and my mom walked out the door, the walk home was silent. When we got home my mom said "Violet you're moving up to Mrs. Clause's first grade class why I said? "Because "my mom said "you're smart you solved the impossible for kindergarteners question". The next day I went to Mrs. Clause's classroom it was colorful, neat and orderly. Everyone laughed when I dropped my books except for one girl (I think her name was Katy), but no one was laughing when we got our tests back from that morning. I score a 100 and everyone else at most got an 80. Later that day on the playground the kids called me goody two shoes and a know it all. When I got home I threw myself on to my bed and cried my heart out. After I finished crying I went to my favorite place the library I got my favorite book sat down in a light blue plushy chair. But it didn't work this time I couldn't stop thinking about what they said. That night no matter how many sheep I counted I couldn't get to sleep their leering faces were laughing meanly at me. I guess I finally slept cause I woke up to the sound of the rain tip tap tip tap. I went downstairs for breakfast and there was my aunt Lacy. I told her everything up to what the mean girls said she hugged me and told me "ignore them and find someone nice" I said okay. Later at recess I saw the girl that hadn't laughed when I dropped my book's I went over to her the girls name was Katy me and her became good friends. Then my birthday swung around in March I invited every girl even though they were mean to me it was fun one girl started to laugh and then everyone laughed and we couldn't stop!